

MIGRATION AND DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION: A SUSTAINABLE APPROACH FOR SOCIETIES

CODEWAY EXPO 2025, Fiera Roma

14 May 3:00 pm. - 5:00 pm. | Cooperation Room - 1st Floor (Hall 2)

The seminar aims to analyse the relationship between vocational training and migration policies, with a focus on opportunities for young people. We need to rethink migration. An approach that sees migration not as a phenomenon to be stopped, but as a phenomenon to be governed so that it can take place under more sustainable and equitable conditions. In this context, training plays a central role, providing young people with the skills they need to effectively enter the labour market, both in their country of origin and destination, and to make informed migration choices, promoting legal, safe and planned migration. Starting from the project A Brighter Future, the seminar will aim to stimulate a pragmatic reflection among the different interlocutors and stakeholders, for a sustainable migration with a positive impact on the new generations and on the development of the communities both in the countries of origin and in the host countries. Discussion and listening can be the best tool to be able to build immigration policies capable of leading to government choices that are as far-sighted as possible.

Agenda:

Moderator: Sandro De Luca, President LINK 2007

Speaker:

Stefano Bianchi, Deputy Director General/Central Director for Migration Policies and International Mobility, DGIT

Laurence Hart, Director of the Mediterranean Coordination Office of the International Organisation for Migration, OIM

Marta Sachy, Director Aurora Foundation

Cleophas Adrien Dioma, President IABW

Stefano Gatti, Director General for Development Cooperation, DGCS